Paper Title: Artificial Intelligence Trends and Ethics: Issues and Alternatives for Investors

Abstract:

Artificial Intelligence (AI) based technology, Machine learning, and cognitive systems have played a very active role in society's economic and technological transformation. For industrial value chains and international businesses, it means that a structural change is necessary since these machines can learn and apply new information in making forecasts, processing, and interacting with people. Artificial Intelligence (AI) is a science that uses powerful enough techniques, strategies, and mathematical modelling to tackle complex actual problems. Because of its inevitable progress further into future, there have been considerable safety and ethical concerns. Creating an environment which is AI friendly for the people and vice versa might be a solution for humans and machines to discover a common set of values. In this context, the goal of this study is to investigate the emerging trends of AI (the benefits that it brings to the society) the moral challenges that come from ethical algorithms, learned or pre-set ideals, as well as addressing the ethical issues and malpractices of AI as well as AI security. This paper will address the consequences of AI in relation to investors and financial services. The article will examine the challenges and possible alternatives for resolving the potential unethical issues in finance and will propose the necessity of new AI Governance Mechanisms to protect the efficiency of the capital markets as well as the role of financial authority in the regulation and monitoring of the huge expansion of AI in finance.

Paper Title: Evaluation of the sustainability of Plasma Oil Palm in Sungai Lilin

Abstract:

The aims of this research are to evaluate the sustainable condition of smallholder oil palm farming based on social, economic, technical, environmental, and institutional dimensions on Indonesia Sustainable Palm Oil (ISPO) criteria in Sungai Lilin District, Banyuasin Regency. The location by purposive location sampling in Sungai Lilin District, Musi Banyuasin Regency, collected data on October 2021. This research uses a survey method and sample using a random method (simple random sampling) by taking 72 palm oil plasma farmers. Empirical data were analyzed using Rapfish Software and collected through in-depth interviews. The results of the analysis of sustainable oil palm plantations are included in the medium criteria with an average sustainability index value of 51.92%, the social, economic, and technical in the fewer criteria, while the environmental dimensions are in the good criteria and the institutional dimensions are in the medium criteria. Furthermore, the most sensitive indicators to the social dimension are public perception and the intensity and effectiveness of extension. The economic dimension is land productivity or income and agricultural inputs. The technical dimensions are technical planting and pest control.
